Something about Gen Z students...

How to describe the typical Gen Z?

How has growing up in an internet-connected society shaped how Gen Z see and experience the world and everyday life?

What do people most misunderstand or get wrong about Gen Z?

As Gen Z enter the workforce, what would be helpful for other generations to know about their post-millennial colleagues?

Role of communication in education

Students frequently highlight communication issues as one of the biggest challenges in education.

Key problems:

- Unclear expectations,
- Mutual misunderstanding,
- Generational differences,
- Lack of feedback clarity.

Impact on education:

- Leads to frustration, disengagement and decreased motivation among students (but also among teachers).

Activity - Your perfect student

Task (part 1)

As a group, think about what a student of your dreams would look like? What traits would he or she have?

You have 10 minutes - be creative!

Activity - Your perfect student

Task (part 2)

Tell us about your vision of the perfect student.

Why is that?

Why exactly are these traits important to you?

What inspired your vision?

Are these expectations realistic?

Activity – The Human Library

The Human Library is an interactive activity designed to foster understanding and improve communication between educators and students. In this exercise, students act as “living books,” sharing their personal experiences, challenges, and perspectives on teaching and learning.

How it works:

- Participants are divided into small groups (2-4 people per group).
- Each group spends 5-6 minutes with one “book” (student), asking questions and listening to their story.
- After each round, groups rotate to a new “book” until all have been visited.
